WILLIAMSVILLE - Jane Corwin, Republican candidate for New York's 26th Congressional District, Friday received the endorsement of the Rochester Business Alliance. Corwin received the endorsement after meeting with members of the organization earlier in the day.

RBA is the chamber of commerce for the nine-county Rochester region, which includes Monroe, Genesee, Livingston, Ontario, Orleans, Seneca, Wayne, Wyoming and Yates counties.

"Having helped run a business that created hundreds of jobs in Western New York, I know what it takes for a business to grow and be successful," Corwin said in a news release. "Small businesses are what grow our economy and create jobs, and having the support of the Rochester Business Alliance -- who is helping to grow our economy every day -- is critical. If honored to be our region's next representative in Congress, I will continue to fight to cut spending and strengthen our economy so members of the RBA and small businesses across Western New York can grow and create jobs here in our communities."

Prior to entering elected office in 2008, Corwin spent 36 years as a successful businesswoman. While helping to grow the family company - the Talking Phone Book - Corwin was part of the team that created hundreds of jobs in Western New York.
